[illegible] the stanchion piece. Mr Shorey cut the chain and none of them were materially injured.

A daughter of Mr. Sumner Peasley, of Windsor, caught the diphtheria while an attendant at the hospital, and went home after her recovery without taking the necessary precautions for disinfection. Since that time, seven of the family have been seriously ill with the epidemic, two dying from its effects. Dr. W. Johnson, Jr., of Cooper's Mills, the physician in attendance, contracted the disease in its most malignant form and is at present in a critical condition.

The ice companies have staked out into claims the whole river between the Kennebec dam and five-mile island, and unless the lower Kennebec closes soon will begin preparations for cutting. Should it be necessary to cut from this new field, side tracks will be built to the river bank, and the ice will be sent down river by cars. The recent cold weather, however, has made the ice men more hopeful, and it is now thought probable that there will be a good crop below Gardiner.

Definite arrangements have been made for the employment of tramps and beggars who every winter seek refuge in the Augusta jail. The County Commissioners have just made a contract with the Augusta Heel Company for the employment of thirty-five men daily in the manufacture of heels. The unused north corridor of the jail will be fitted up as a workshop, and a new stove put in. The heat and light will be furnished by the county and all apparatus by the company. Work will begin as soon as the necessary dies and blocks can be procured.

The trustees of the North Kennebec Agricultural Society have voted to lease their fair grounds, in Waterville, for a term of ten years to Mr. C. H. Nelson of that city. It is understood that Mr. Nelson will make great improvements in the property this spring, pay the present liabilities of the society, and at the end of his lease, give them back the grounds on their payment of the money advanced, with interest, and betterments. Mr. Nelson will build a new judges' stand, grand stand, and make other improvements. The agricultural society reserves to itself the use of the grounds for its annual show and fair.

The Kennebec County delegation will soon meet to consider the advisability of an act authorizing the County Commissioners to raise money for an addition to the Court House. The enlargement of the building has long been needed, and when the necessary addition shall be built is merely a question of time. It is planned to throw the probate vault into that of the registry of deeds, transform the County Commissioners' room into a vault for the probate office, and add the janitor's room to the clerk of court's vault. Two wings could then be built at the eastern end of the building, in the lower portion of which could be rooms for the Commissioners and the jury, and in the upper part, traverse jury rooms.

The Clover Club in Philadelphia presented menus printed in English at its recent banquet, and the guests knew that they were eating "cherry stone oysters," "sheeps'head, with clover sauce" (copyrighted), "a mouthful of sweet breads, truffles, fresh mushrooms and lobster" and other dishes whose French titles had been translated, for the occasion. There was general satisfaction among the guests.

A young college student who recently acted as a "supper" for Booth and Barrett, says that the latter is a wonderfully developed man muscularly. In the scene in "Othello" where his jealousy has worked him up to the highest pitch of passion his muscles in the neck stand out like whipcords. Off the stage he is a nervous individual and easily excited. When anything goes wrong he expresses himself in strong words. When his part is over he makes for the waiting-room and there remains until his turn comes again. When he comes forth there must be no obstacle in his way, otherwise the first individual he meets catches it.

Alexander Squires, the old Californian who came after the gold which he deposited in the Philadelphia Mint, in 1855, was at the Mint on Wednesday and wrote his name and address, to be compared with his signature in 1855. While the official was searching the records, running his finger up and down columns, Squires quietly remarked, "You needn't go down so far; my signature will be found on the first column on right hand side of the leaf, three or four lines down," which proved to be correct in every particular. The signatures were exact, allowing for the slightly more shaky penmanship of increased age. The modern "Rip Van Winkle" got his money.

Ex-Postmaster General James is now the head of the great safe-deposit company in whose vaults are stored the plate and jewels of the Astors and the Vanderbilts. There, too, are the bonds and securities of the Lorillards, the certificates of the Standard Oil magnates, and the deeds of many of the Western bonanza kings. "If fancy," says a writer who recently peeped into the vaults of the company, "that not one man out of a thousand has any conception of the treasures here concealed. Battered trunks, tin boxes, old barrels, and a thousand other receptacles, duly labeled and addressed, stand high as the ceiling on every hand, each one containing a fabulous fortune in itself."

A very good story is told of Larry Jerome. He was not feeling in the best of spirits, and for a little change and recreation he visited a popular resort in the Jersey pines. After a week's stay, he called for his bill, and on paying started to go when the landlord called him. "Mr. Jerome," said the landlord, "I have a little tourist book that I keep for my guests to write in before leaving, and if you have no objections would be pleased to have a few words from you." "Certainly," said Mr. Jerome. Taking the book he noticed the following from the last gentleman registered. "I came here for change and [illegible] London, Ont." [illegible]

[illegible] forgings. The sternpost sides at head, 2½ inches, and 1½ inches at the heel. The stem sides are 1½ inches, and both stem and post, moulds 3½ inches. The frame space is twenty-two inches. She will be finished with a "trunk" cabin that will project above the deck fourteen inches, and about thirty two feet fore-and-aft, leaving at its sides a gangway of about three feet.

The masts will be of Oregon pine, and the rig will be of the prevailing type of racing schooner, with a spike bowsprit. Of course she will have a large sail plan; her "technical" stability must be enormous, comparatively. The mainsail of this schooner is very sharp at the bow, which the rake of the stem makes long. Nearly long on the harpins. To the unprofessional eye of the reporter, Mr. Burgess' last design has made a slight departure from the form of his previous yachts. In the stature of the lateral plane there is little or no drag from midships to the sternpost. From amidships forward the keel rises "quickly" and the rather straight line runs into a short forefoot, thence upward into a raking stem, and, blending into a curve of contrary flexture, finishes with a long and handsome cutwater. The bow finish of the schooner, as it appears on the drawing, is far superior to anything Mr. Burgess has designed before in point of artistic taste. The gunwale shear is straight, with overhanging ends, about twelve feet at the stern and seven feet at the bow. The sternpost rakes about 20°. The midship section is very hollow at the garboards, with little or no tumble home at the top sides. In shape the model under water has the usual Burgess look, with, perhaps, a little more hollow in the bow water lines than such yachts as the Titania and Marguerite.

The moulds of Mr. Morgan's steel schooner will be finished this week. This is the largest sailing yacht that Mr. Burgess has yet produced. The dimensions of this big racing schooner are as follows:

	Feet.	In.
Length over all,	131	0
Length on load water line,	100	0
Extreme beam,	24	0
Extreme depth,	15	6
Draught of water (extreme),	12	3
Ballast in tons,	80	0
Ballast in keel (in tons),	40	0
Length free board,	4	0

This schooner will be built of the best quality of mild steel. It can be seen in the foregoing table that her dimensions indicate a powerful vessel, and she will, no doubt, be spared accordingly; and with no other material than steel can the requisite combination of lightness and strength be obtained. Her keel will be of the "trough" type, and supported at the corners with long Bulb Tee steel angles, 3x3x1-16 inches. The stem will side 1½ inches, and mould 8 inches. The sternpost will side 4 inches at the head and 1½ inches at the heel, and will mould 4½ inches at the head and 8½ inches at heel. Both stem and post will be wrought out of the best bar forgings, and be rabbetted below the waterline to receive the bottom planking. The frames will be of angle bars, 3½x3½x3-16 inches, and rivetted inside and given to the keel. They will be spaced 24 inches. The frames will be reversed, the advantage of strength abreast of the masts with reverse angle bars [illegible] will be of the [illegible] most important remedy.

For Home Use.

I have tested its curative power, in my family, many times during the past thirty years, and have never known it to fail. It will relieve the most serious affections of the throat and lungs, whether in children or adults.—Mrs. E. G. Edgerly, Council Bluffs, Iowa.

Twenty years ago I was troubled with a disease of the lungs. Doctors afforded me no relief and considered my case hopeless. I then began to use Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, and, before I had finished one bottle, found relief. I continued to take this medicine until a cure was effected. I believe that Ayer's Cherry Pectoral saved my life.—Samuel Griggs, Waukegan, Ill.

Six years ago I contracted a severe cold, which settled on my lungs, and soon developed all the alarming symptoms of Consumption. I had a cough, night sweats, bleeding of the lungs, pains in chest and sides, and was so prostrated as to be confined to my bed most of the time. After trying various prescriptions, without benefit, my physician finally determined to give me Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. I took it, and the effect was magical. I seemed to rally from the first dose of this medicine, and, after using only three bottles, am as well and hearty as ever.—Rodney Spimsah, Springfield, Ill.

Making Laws for Maine.

The attention of those Maine Republican newspapers who oppose ballot reform is called to the fact that the only Governor who has ever shown his dislike of such a reform by his veto is Gov. Hill, of New York, whose majority comes from the saloons and vice-breeding purlieus of New York city. Gov. Hill knew on which side his bread was buttered. With a clean ballot he did not feel secure. If there is one thing more than any other the Republican party is pledged to it is a free vote and fair count. Any system of laws framed to secure this it must defend, and sustain or confess itself insincere and hypocritical.—Biddeford Journal.

Now will our esteemed contemporary please inform an interested public what connection there is between the action of Gov. Hill and the discussion as to the necessity of a secret ballot in Maine? Ever since this matter has been before the people the papers favoring the change in our election laws have resorted to such arguments as the above, which, in our opinion, only serves to illustrate the weakness of their position. We are not considering legislation for New York, but for Maine. The only question for the Legislature to meet is whether the proposed change is necessary in this State, and anything that tends to divert attention from this essential point weakens rather than strengthens the case of the advocates of the secret ballot bill. The Whig has been quite as steadfast in its championship of a free vote and a fair count as the papers now advocating this bill, and when that is denied to the people of the State of Maine we shall favor such changes in our laws as will most effectually remedy the evil. Are our people now defrauded of their rights at the polls? We say they are not; that in the elections last fall the voters freely and fairly recorded their preferences as between the different political parties and therefore there is no occasion for meddling with the statutes in this State, whatever may be the condition of affairs elsewhere.

Tariff Bill Adopted.

The Senate Tariff bill, passed yesterday by a strict party vote, yeas thirty-two, nays thirty. Mr. Vance gave his last expiring kick at the tariff by an amendment to put lumber on the free list. The Republicans defeated the amendment, two Democrats, Brown and Call of Georgia, voting with them. How grateful the Maine Democrats should be to their party for this last attempt to break down the barriers that stands between our lumbermen and Canadian competition. Still they will keep right on voting the Democratic ticket while expecting the Republicans to save them from disaster. The bill now goes to the House, which will probably refuse to adopt the substitute for the Mills bill.

Bangor Will Be Heard From.

The Portland Press is making a gallant fight for the removal of the State Capitol to the "Natural Seaport," and if the business men of that city were only alive to their interests the thing could easily be accomplished. A little "down east" push would be a good thing in Portland just now. Just think how Bangor would take hold of such a project.—Fairfield Journal.

Bangor will take hold of the project when it seems at all likely that the State Capitol is to be moved from its present location. With the exception of the question of population, which is in favor of Portland, although of no especial importance as regards this particular matter, Bangor can present a stronger case than any other city in the State, being more centrally located.

Suppression of the Republican Vote.

The New York Tribune is doing good work in calling attention at this time to the unfair advantage obtained by the Democrats in the South by reason of the suppression of the Republican vote, supporting its argument by figures which our Democratic contemporaries let severely alone. This unfair advantage, it says, extends not only to representation in Congress, but necessarily to the election of President. How great it is may be seen by comparing the official vote in a number of Northern and Southern States with the electoral vote of each. Divide the total vote of each State by the number of its electoral votes, and this is the number of votes represented by one electoral vote in the following States:

Pennsylvania	31,230
Indiana	33,700
Ohio	36,337
New York	38,387
Minnesota	37,612
Michigan	30,113

Applying the same process to the vote of certain Southern States, we have the following, as the number of votes represented by one electoral vote:

Alabama	17,511
Florida	16,655
Louisiana	14,435
Mississippi	12,815
Georgia	11,901
South Carolina	8,340

One vote in South Carolina then has as much power in the election of a President as five votes of Michigan. Will any intelligent man pretend to believe that this is a healthful condition of affairs, or a fit subject for the flippant treatment bestowed upon it by the Northern doughfaces? Their favorite answer to such representations is the suggestion—for they have no proofs to offer—that the negroes are learning to vote the Democratic ticket. This is disproved by many circumstances, one of which is that in the States in which the negroes are thoroughly cowed comparatively few whites take the trouble to vote, and the Democratic vote has fallen off so much that it is absurd to suppose that any considerable number of negroes are voting that ticket. But a still more important one is that in other States where it is notorious the negroes enjoy more liberty, they are evidently still voting the Republican ticket with enthusiasm.

How is this to be accounted for except upon the theory that in some States the Republican vote is thoroughly cowed or counted out, while in some others it manages to make itself felt, though not to the degree that might be expected with thoroughly honest elections? If the negro is tired of voting the Republican ticket in Louisiana, why not in Virginia? We have already printed the figures showing that in the five States of Alabama, Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi and South Carolina the Republican vote has fallen off since 1876, 186,730 votes, although the total vote of the country has increased during that time 36 per cent. Now take certain other Southern States, and it will be found that the Republicans, instead of having learned to vote the Democratic ticket, have increased their vote during that time, though they have not always been allowed to get their full share of the increase of the total vote. The following are five Southern States in which the Republican vote has shown large gains in the last twelve years:

	1876	1888	Increase.
Arkansas	78,888	57,192	47 per cent.
North Carolina	106,411	134,784	24 per cent.
Tennessee	96,268	130,366	35 per cent.
Virginia	95,558	149,608	57 per cent.
Texas	44,806	88,520	97 per cent.

These figures make a surprising contrast to those from Alabama, Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi and South Carolina, which show a decrease in the Republican vote ranging all the way from 15 to 84 per cent. It would be rash, however, to infer that the situation of the Republican voters in the States named in the table just given is all that can be desired. The following will show that good care is usually taken that the Republican vote shall not reach the danger point. Even where their vote has increased faster than the total vote they do not succeed in carrying the State:

	Increase of Republican vote since 1876.	Increase of total vote since 1876.
Arkansas	47 per cent.	66 per cent.
North Carolina	24 per cent.	30 per cent.
Tennessee	35 per cent.	36 per cent.
Virginia	57 per cent.	59 per cent.
Texas	97 per cent.	98 per cent.

All these figures go to show the astonishing vitality of the Republican party, even under conditions that are not favorable. They completely dispose of the theory that the disappearance of the Republican vote in half a dozen Southern States is due to natural causes.

Goff Will Not be Bulldosed.

A Wheeling, West Virginia, despatch this outlines the Democratic plot to steal control of the State government. It is now more apparent than ever that the result of the present contest for the Governorship in this State will be a dual government for a brief space at least, after March 4th, and that the Federal Administration will have to be called upon to settle the difficulty. The situation is a grave one and results from one of the most base and unscrupulous schemes to defeat the will of the people that has ever been hatched in any State of the Union. It is briefly this:

No sooner had the Democrats been defeated in the courts in their efforts to prevent the delivery of the returns of Kanawha County to the Legislature, with which Goff has a majority of the votes cast for Governor in the State, than the revolutionists began to search the constitution for technical pretexts for withholding a declaration of the result when the vote should come to be opened in the presence of the two houses in joint assembly. The Constitution requires the Speaker of the House, in the presence of the two houses sitting in joint assembly to open and publish the vote, after which the person having the highest vote is to be declared elected Governor. The scheme now hatching in Charleston is to refuse to declare the result on the pretext of Flemingism contest and thus make it possible for Governor Wilson to hold over after March 4 next and keep the seat warm for Fleming until, after he should have been declared, as soon as may be, by a partisan majority entitled to the place.

The revolutionists propose to find in section third of article seventh of the constitution a pretext for their proposed programme. This section reads as follows:

"The returns of every election for the above named offices shall be sealed up and transmitted by the returning officer to the Secretary of the State, direct to the Speaker of the House of Delegates, who shall, immediately after the organization of the House and before proceeding to business, open and publish the same in the presence of a majority in each House of the Legislature, which shall for that purpose assemble in the House of Delegates. The person having the largest number of votes for such offices shall be declared duly elected thereto; but if two or more have an equal and the highest number of votes for the same office the Legislature shall by joint vote choose one of such persons for said office."

Speaker Woods, as soon as he opens and reads the returns, is to go no further, on the pretext that it is doubtful whether he is the proper person to declare the result, notwithstanding it is, and always has been the practice so to do, and the joint assembly is to be declared dissolved and the State being without a Governor on March 4 next, Wilson is to continue until Fleming can be slipped in after a farce of a contest is gone through with.

But General Goff does not intend that the failure to declare the result at Charleston shall cheat him out of the governorship and put Fleming in. The formality which the revolutionists propose to withhold does not invalidate the result at the polls. The formality of declaring the result, which the returns declare, which the Speaker must open and read, does not affect in the slightest the right of the person found to have the highest vote from qualifying for his position. That General Goff will go before a proper officer and take the oath of office as governor-elect of this State will certainly occur if he is alive. If he is denied entry into the State House, and forcibly resisted, he will call first upon the civilian aid of the State, and next, as commander-in-chief of the militia, he will call on the military. If Governor Wilson resists to this point and also calls out the military to aid him the Government of the United States will be promptly appealed to and there is no reasonable doubt that it will promptly respond.

BLAZE IN ROCKLAND.

Business Block Badly Burned.

The Thorndike Hotel Narrowly Escaped.

ROCKLAND, Jan. 22. The most disastrous fire that has occurred in this city for years broke out at 6 o'clock this morning in the business portion of Main street. The fire originated in the second story of a large block, in Dr. D. F. Batchelder's office. The block joined the Thorndike Hotel. The occupants of the block were Mrs. Sleeper, millinery store, Rose Brothers, the leading tailors of the city, Norcross & Co., drugs. There were a number of tenants in the upper story, including a barber's shop and doctor's office. Quite a high wind was prevailing at the time and it was feared that the Thorndike Hotel and a large portion of the buildings on Main street would be swept away.

The greatest excitement prevailed and many occupants of stores in the neighborhood began preparations for moving their stocks. Fortunately, however, the fire was got under control and confined to the block in which it originated. The fire is supposed to have originated from a defective flue and rapidly spread to adjoining rooms, working up to the roof. The building is known as the White and Wilson block. The entire third and a part of the second story being leased by the proprietors of the hotel, led fitted up into rooms. The fire raged for two hours and a half, the intense cold making it difficult to get control of it, the water freezing almost before striking the building. The loss will approximate $30,000. All the parties are wholly or partially insured.

The Loss from $30,000 to $35,000.

The fire was not extinguished until four o'clock this afternoon. A steamer was brought from Thomaston, seven streams being thrown. A strong northwest wind prevailed, threatening the destruction of the adjoining blocks. The intense cold caused the water to freeze almost as soon as it left the nozzle. The lower floor was not invaded by the flames but the stocks were ruined by water. The insurance is as follows: Block, owned by John S. Case and Albert Reeves, of New York, $8,000; proprietors of Hotel, $6,000; Rose Bros. tailors, $5,000; Norcross & Co., $4,000; Mrs. T. Sleeper, milliner, $2,000; total, $25,000. The loss will exceed the insurance by from five to ten thousand dollars.

CONGRESSIONAL.

The Senate Passes the Tariff Bill.

A Customs Commission Established.

The House Wastes Another Day in Inaction.

Senate.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22. The Senate resumed consideration of the tariff bill, the pending question being on the amendment offered by Mr. Regan to the wool section. The amendment was rejected.

Mr. Vance moved a proviso that no article in the wool and woolen schedule should pay a rate of duty exceeding 75 per cent ad valorem; rejected.

The schedule relating to wood and wooden wares was then taken up.

An amendment was agreed to, inserting the words, "white pine, one dollar and fifty cents per one thousand feet, board measure."

Mr. Vest moved to amend by striking out the words "two dollars per thousand" in the paragraph at to clapboards and insetting "shall be admitted free of duty".

The amendment offered by Mr. Vance to make lumber of all kinds free of duty was rejected by a strict party vote, except that Messrs. Call and Brown voted with Republicans.

Mr. Vance's amendment, placing lumber on the free list, was defeated after considerable debate, 19 to 29, Messrs. Brown and Call voting against it.

Mr. Hiscock, on behalf of the Finance Committee, offered a proviso which was agreed to, that in case of the imposition of export duties, by any foreign government, the duty on such sawed lumber shall remain as under the present law.

Mr. Aldrich, on behalf of the Finance Committee, moved to insert, after paragraph 230, the words, "Reeds, 10 per cent ad valorem, chair cane 15"; agreed to.

Mr. Aldrich also moved to increase the rate on sawed boards of mahogany, etc (paragraph 215), from 15 to 20 per cent ad valorem; agreed to.

Mr. Vest moved to put on the free list wood manufactured (paragraph 214,) and sawed boards of mahogany, etc., (paragraph 215); rejected.

Mr. Sherman offered a proviso which was agreed to, to paragraph 267, taxing fresh fish half a cent a pound, that the duty shall not apply to fresh fish caught by citizens of the United States on the high seas or in open waters of the lakes forming the boundary between the United States and Canada.

Mr. Blair moved to amend, paragraphs 219 and 220, in the sugar schedule, by reducing the rate on sugar above number 16 and not above number 20, Dutch standard from 1 3-8 to 1 4-8 cents per pound, and on sugar above number 20 from 2 cents to 1 7-8 cents. He made an argument in support of the amendment, which was opposed by Mr. Aldrich who said it would destroy the sugar refining interests; rejected.

Paragraph 412, calf skins, etc., was amended by increasing the ad valorem rate from 20 to 25 per cent, and on skins for morocco from 10 to 15 per cent.

On motion of Mr. Aldrich, from the Committee, the rice paragraph was finally amended, 45 to 11, by making the rate 1½ cents on cleaned rice, one cent on uncleaned rice, one half cent on paddy rice, and one-quarter on broken rice.

Mr. Plumb moved to insert an additional paragraph, creating and establishing in the Treasury Department a commission, known as the customs commission; agreed to.

It provides for the appointment by the President, with the advice and consent of the Senate, of five commissioners, to hold office two, three, four, five and six years, respectively; not more than three to be of the same political party, with a salary of $7,500 per annum, the permanent office of the Commission to be in Washington.

An amendment reported from the Finance Committee to paragraph 257, as to oranges, lemons and limes was agreed to. It increases the rates per package, according to capacity, from 10, 20 and 40 to 13, 25 and 50 cents, and from 8 cents for every additional cubic foot, to ten cents.

Mr. Allison offered an amendment from the committee, agreed to, repealing the provision of the law requiring a stamp to be affixed to every box of imported cigars to indicate the inspection thereof by customs officers.

Several other amendments offered were rejected.

On motion of Mr. Allison, the date for the bill to go into effect, section 12, was changed from February 1st, 1889, to July 1st, 1889.

The substitute was then accepted and the bill passed by a strict party vote, yeas 39, nays 30.

Mr. Riddleberger stated that had he not been paired, he would have voted against the bill on account of the adoption of the amendments of Mr. Plumb, presumably the customs commission provision.

Adjourned till noon to-morrow.

House.

Mr. Crisp called up, as a privileged matter, the contested election case of Smalls against Elliott. The House refused to consider it.

After half an hour of filibustering by Mr. Cheadle, the House went into Committee of the Whole on the river and harbor appropriation bill.

Mr. Coar, of New York, offered an amendment, appropriating $50,000 for the establishment of a harbor of refuge at Point Judith, R. I., and read memorials from the New York Chamber of Commerce and other commercial bodies in advocacy of the proposition. These, he obtained leave to have printed in the Record. He then withdrew the amendment, stating that he had only desired to put the facts before the House, upon which it could base future action.

Filibustering of a mild but effective type was indulged in by Messrs. Bowden, of Pennsylvania, and Cheadle, of Indiana, to impede the progress of the bill for the improvement of Gowanus bay, which was finally lost, and pending further action the committee rose and the House adjourned.

FROM WASHINGTON.

News About the Capital.

The Troubles in Samoa.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22. Secretary Bayard was interviewed to-day relative to the despatches from London and Berlin on Samoa matters. He refused to discuss the subject in the press, but referred the questioner to the President's message to Congress of the 11th inst. as an indication of this government's policy; also his letter to German Minister of the 12th instant as indicative of his own views on the subject. He said: "Of course I expect Germany to live up to her honorable engagements with the United States. I have no right to think otherwise."

He also alluded to the agreement entered into between the English and German dominions in the West Pacific Ocean, in which it is specifically declared that the Samoan Islands are neutral territory. The United States, he explained, has no joint treaty with either England or Germany in regard to the neutrality of Samoa, therefore if Germany has interfered with the neutrality of that country, she has not broken a treaty with the United States but one with Great Britain.

The Nicaragua Canal Bill.

The conferees on the part of the House on the Nicaragua Canal bill to-day reached an agreement. AMUSEMENTS.

Little Lord Fauntleroy.

Another very large audience gave Little Lord Fauntleroy a warm reception last evening upon the occasion of the repetition of the delightful play, and it is needless to say that the success of the previous performance was once more the result. It is a play highly pleasing to old and young alike, and never fails to make a deep impression. The company added to its laurels already won and each character was assumed in a most effective manner. Owing to an accident which yesterday befel Belle Ross, who was to have taken the part of "Little Lord Fauntleroy," she was unable to appear, and Wallie Eidinger again charmed each member of the audience. The visit of the company has been a source of enjoyment to very many of our people.

Dockstader's Minstrels.

There has been an excellent sale of seats for the performance this evening by Dockstader's Minstrels and there will undoubtedly be a large attendance. Report indicates that the troupe will give one of the best entertainments in the burnt cork line ever presented here, and one of a high order of minstrelsy. This company will appear here in its entirety, giving the same excellent programme which met with such warm praise during their recent engagements in the Boston Theatre, augmenting even that array of novelties by concluding with a fine burlesque of the popular opera "Erminie," in which the most famous airs of that operatic work will be sung. It may be necessary to explain that Dockstader's company has never made any street parades, depending on their reputation as artists to do more for them than the senseless and undignified display in the streets so common with the average minstrel show. The company numbers thirty-four members.

The McGibeny Family.

Some very enjoyable concerts are expected to be given by the McGibeny Family at the Opera House tomorrow and Friday evenings and Friday afternoon at 3.30 o'clock, and the reputation of this family warrants such anticipation. The Manchester Union says in its notice:

Pre eminent for his skill, finish and command of his instrument, the violin, must stand Hugh McGibeny. His solo was one of the best heard for a long time and his imitations were almost perfect. Hugh is a star performer. Master Dockie, hardly taller than his clarionet, gave a fine solo upon that instrument and merited the hearty reception he received. Master Jackie, as director of the orchestra, evinced a clear understanding of the music and his efforts to secure expression were pleasing to witness. Master Leo, the midget, although hardly able to toddle about the stage, sang sweetly and with such expression as to be clearly heard and appreciated. The whole performance is novel and enjoyable, sure to find favor with everyone who has an ear for music or a heart for children.

The hearing before the Legislative Committee on Railroads and Telegraphs of the bill to ratify the lease of the Bangor and Katahdin Iron Works Railway to the Bangor and Piscataquis, which was to have been held to-day, has been postponed until Wednesday next, 30th instant, by agreement of both parties, at the request of Hon. G. D. Rahar who is counsel for the remonstrants.

LOCAL MATTERS.

There will be a meeting of the Boys Union this afternoon at 2.30 in the Y. M. C. A. A full attendance is desired.

Hon. S. N. Campbell, of Cherryfield left Monday morning for Washington, taking the electoral returns from Maine.

The extensive water power at the mouth of the Piscataquis river has been bonded by the Piscataquis Falls Pulp and Paper Company.

Senator Frye has presented Hon. Henry Lord, President of the Maine Senate, with a morocco bound copy of the rules of the United States Senate.

The big candy cane in the window of Burrill's fruit store, 61 Hammond street, will be given away next Friday evening to the one holding the lucky ticket.

The clergymen of Bangor have been presented with complimentary tickets to the McGibeny Family performance, through the courtesy of the managers.

The extensive use that is made of mileage tickets in railroad travel is well shown from the fact that nearly one-third of the Maine Central passengers use them.

Regular business meeting of the Grand Lodge this afternoon at half past two; prayer meeting, to which all are invited, at four; held in the reading room, Franklin street.

The enterprising Kennebec Journal of yesterday morning contains portraits and biographical sketches of the members of Governor Burleigh's staff, among them are those of Dr. D. A. Robinson and Col. H. D. Pullen, of this city.

Mrs. Timothy Crowley, on Thomas Lane, who was scalded a week ago Monday by slipping on some ice while carrying a tub of hot water, died from her injuries this morning soon after midnight. She was forty-eight years old.

The citizens of Ellsworth are alive to the necessity of establishing local manufactories in that city. A Business Men's Association has been organized and an agent sent to Massachusetts to induce capitalists to start manufactories there.

The middle class in German will meet to-day at 4 P. M. at the Y. M. C. A. rooms for instruction, and the advanced class at Miss May Ayer's, No. 102 Grove street, when Prof. Braun will commence his lectures on German literature. All are expected to be present.

On Saturday and Sunday, February 2d and 3d, Staff Capt. Watkins, the Welsh Songstress, will sing and speak at the Salvation Army barracks. She is from New York headquarters and is travelling in behalf of the Salvation Army Men's Training Home of that city.

Some of our business men had the roofs of their blocks cleared of snow yesterday, so that there should be no snow slides when a warm day comes. This example should be followed by all from whose roofs the harmful snow slide is liable to fall upon the heads of passers by.

Dr. S. B. Morison received quite a painful fall Monday in front of his residence but no serious consequences will follow. He slipped upon some ice concealed by the snow and fell, injuring one of his ribs. He is confined to the house at present, but will probably be out again soon.

The senior class of the High School will give an entertainment in a few weeks, probably in City Hall, and the necessary arrangements for the event will soon be begun. The kind of entertainment has not yet been settled upon, but it is probable that a play will be the feature.

Sleighs were out in force yesterday after an enforced retirement of several weeks, and many enjoyed a ride, notwithstanding the cold weather. It was a clear and beautiful winter's day and with plenty of wraps riding was pleasant, while it was excellent weather for brisk pedestrianism.

A large number of the inhabitants of Maine towns are demanding a law to prevent the manufacture and sale of adulterated food and drink. One single batch of twelve petitions for the enactment of such a law has been presented in the Senate and additional petitions of the same tenor are said to be forthcoming.

The travelling over the country roads is very fair after the snow storm, but there are many places where the bare ground shows the snow having been blown by the wind. There are some drifts but they are not deep. It is very good sleighing in the city, and a sleigh slips along very easily, although the snow is rather loose yet. It will improve as it becomes hardened.

Sleds, toboggans and snow shoes will now have their innings, after being deposited in the out of the way corners so far this winter. They will now shine conspicuous in the most prominent places in the stores, and put the festive skate in the shade. There was a good demand for snow shovels yesterday, and many of our citizens broke down good coal bins and strained hitherto unimpaired muscles in a struggle with the beautiful snow.

Mr. George P. Allen, representing the Excelsior Electric Lighting Company, of New York, and Mr. J. George Felbor, representing the Western Company, of the same place, arrived in the city yesterday to make the bids for their companies for putting in the contemplated electric light plant in this city. They have been preceded by several others, so that there will be a number of bids for the work. The bids will close to-day, and will be opened by the committee.

The large residence in Brewer opposite High Head, occupied by Mr. Weeks, and owned by Mr. William Robinson, who lives a short distance away, was burned to the ground yesterday afternoon. As soon as the fire was discovered an alarm was sounded and the fire department was promptly on the scene. The flames were under such headway, however, and spread so rapidly that the efforts to save the house were unavailing and it was destroyed with most of its contents.

Saturday last General Harrison and wife made a flying visit to an old friend, Hon. W. R. McKeen, at Terre Haute, Indiana. The party drove out two miles to Edgewood farm, owned by Mr. McKeen, where they dined with Mr. William Boyce, who has charge of the farm. Mr. Boyce is a former Bangor boy and served in the army as captain in the 15th Maine. He is a son of Capt. Michael Boyce, of this city, who was also captain in the 15th Maine, and his many friends here will be pleased to learn that he is so pleasantly located.

Mr. Frank Small, whose home is in Old Town, while at work, on Friday in the woods above Moosehead Lake for Mr. Gilbert Davis, the well known lumberman, broke his arm quite badly. The arm was bandaged by his companions and he was taken in a team to Greenville where he was obliged to wait over Sunday before going home. The broken bone was set in Greenville. It had been bandaged so well after the accident happened that the young man felt but little pain and it was easily set. He will not be able to work again for a number of weeks.

COUNTY UNIVERSITY NOTES. Our County correspondent writes: Henry Fletcher, '88, will fill the vacancy at Hebron Academy caused by the resignation of G. P. Phelps.——The College Athletic Association will give an exhibition at City Hall this evening.——The Junior prize debate will take place in the chapel Friday evening, Feb. 1st.——Considerable interest is already manifested over the coming base ball season. Manager Putnam has made arrangements with M. J. Madden of the Bangors of last season to coach. Parsons and Wagg during the winter vacation. Madden will come to Waterville, February 15th.

Mr. W. D. Wing and wife, of Wingleton, Mich., who left this city Saturday after a visit, as announced, are on their way to Washington. Mr. Wing is senior member of the large lumber manufacturing firm of Wingleton, which is named for his family. He also has a large lumber establishment at Valparaiso, Chili, South America, and a box factory about a hundred miles down the coast on Conception River. Mr. Wing looked over Hutchins' box factory in Auburn during his stay there. His family reside in this city. On his return from Washington he will start for Valparaiso, which will make the twenty-fourth time he has been over the distance, going and coming.

THE ICE CROP. Most of the ice companies on the river were scraping their fields yesterday preparatory to cutting in a short time. It will cost but little to do the scraping at the present time, and there is an excellent quality of ice below the snow, nine inches or more in thickness. Cutting will probably begin about the first of next month, and it is intended to housing a large crop. The Bangor Ice Company had a crew scraping off the snow from the field on Kenduskeag stream, and will soon begin cutting. Triggs & Co., who have been cutting for some time in the stream, have about completed. The Orrington Ice Company has sold 5,000 tons of the last year's crop. The prospects at the present time are excellent for a crop of thick ice of a good quality.

INSTALLATION OF OFFICERS. Our Kenduskeag correspondent writes: The following named officers were publicly installed on Wednesday evening last by Past Master Ora M. Harvey, assisted by John E. Dolliver, as Marshal of Kenduskeag Lodge, F. and A. M.: Albert Hodgdon, Master; George Carter, S. W.; John H. Tuttle, J. W.; W. C. Spratt, Secretary; S. Harvey, Treasurer; Wilbur A. Shaw, D. M.; E. A. Pierce, J. D.; F. W. Perkins, S. S.; Wallace, W. Patterson, J. S.; Rev. John T. Backus, Chaplain; M. L. Fisher, Marshal. An oyster supper was served after the installation to a large crowd and those that were that way inclined retired to the hotel hall, where they tripped the light fantastic toe to the number of about forty couples. All pronounced it a success. When the rain descended there was a very sudden breaking up of the once happy gathering.

This medicine is an Alterative, and causes a radical change in the system. The process, in some cases, may not be quite so rapid as in others; but, with persistence, the result is certain. Read these testimonials:—

"For two years I suffered from a severe pain in my right side, and had other troubles caused by a torpid liver and dyspepsia. After giving several medicines a fair trial without a cure, I began to take Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I was greatly benefited by the first bottle, and after taking five bottles I was completely cured."—John W. Bonson, 70 Lawrence st., Lowell, Mass.

"Last May a large carbuncle broke out on my arm. The usual remedies had no effect and I was confined to my bed for eight weeks. A friend induced me to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Less than three bottles healed the sore. In all my experience with medicine, I never saw more."

Wonderful Results.

Another marked effect of the use of this medicine was the strengthening of my sight."—Mrs. Carrie Adams, (Holly Springs, Texas.

"I had a dry scaly humor for years, and suffered terribly; and, as my brother and sister were similarly afflicted, I presume the malady is hereditary. Last winter, Dr. Tyron, (of Fernandina, Fla.,) recommended me to take Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and continue it for a year. For two months I took it daily. I have not had a blemish upon my body for the last three months."—T. E. Wiley, 146 Chambers st., New York City.

"Last fall and winter I was troubled with a dull, heavy pain in my side. I did not notice to much at first, but it gradually grew worse until it became almost unbearable. During the latter part of this time, disorders of the stomach and liver increased my troubles. I began taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and, after faithfully continuing the use of this medicine for some months, the pain disappeared, and I was completely cured."—Mrs. Augusta A. MISS BRETHERTON

By MRS. HUMPHREY WARD,

AUTHOR OF "ROBERT ELSMERE."

"No whispering there," said Forbes, looking round upon them. "Oh, I know what you're after, Edward, perfectly. I hear it all with one ear."

"Then," said Wallace, moving up to him, "it physically impossible. Don't be so pugnacious. We leave you the fruit of the box, and when we appear in your territory our mouths are closed. But in our own domain we claim the right of free meat."

"Poor girl!" said Forbes, with a sigh. "How she manages to tame London as she does is a marvel to me. If she were a shade less perfect and wonderful than she is she would have been torn to pieces by you critics long ago. You have done your best as it is, only the public won't listen to you. Oh, don't suppose I don't see all that you see. The critical poison's in my veins just as it is in yours, but I hold it in check—it shan't master me. I will have my pleasure in spite of it, and when I come across anything in life that makes me feel I will protect my feelings from it with all my might."

"We are dumb," said Kendal, with a smile; "otherwise I would pedantically ask you to consider what are the feelings to which the dramatic art properly and legitimately appeals."

"Oh, hang 'your dramatic art!' said Forbes, flinging up his hands; "only you take things simply and straightforwardly! She is there—she is doing her best for you—there isn't a movement or a look which isn't as glorious as that of a Diana come to earth, and you won't let it charm you and conquer you, because she isn't into the bargain as confoundedly clever as you are yourselves! Well, it's your loss, not hers."

"My dear Mr. Forbes," said Mrs Stuart, with her little judicial peace making air, "we shall go away contented. You will have had your sensation, they will have had their sense of superiority, and as for me, I shall get the best of it all round. For while you are here, I see Miss Bretherton with your eyes, and yet, as Edward will get hold of me on the way home, I shan't go to bed without having experienced all the joys of criticism! Oh! but now, hush, and listen to this music. It is one of the best things in the evening, and we shall have the White Lady directly."

As she spoke the orchestra, which was a good one, and perhaps the most satisfactory feature in the performance, broke into some weird Mendelssohnian music, and when the note of plaintiveness and mystery had been well established, the curtain rose upon the great armory of the castle, a dim, distinguishable light shining upon its fretted roof and masses of faintly gleaming steel. The scene which followed, in which the Countess Hilda, disguised as the traditional phantom of the Hohenzollerns, whose appearance boded misfortune and death to those who beheld it, throws herself across the path of her rival in the hope of driving her and those interested in her by sheer force of terror from the castle and from Berlin, had been poetically conceived, and it furnished Miss Bretherton with an admirable opportunity. As the White Lady, gliding between rows of armed and spectral figures on either hand, and startling the princess and her companion by her sudden apparition in a gleam of moonlight across the floor, she was once more the representative of all that is most poetical and romantic in physical beauty. Nay, more than this; as she flung her white arms above her head, or pointed to the shrieking and fainting figure of her rival, which she uttered her wailing traditional prophecy of woe, her whole personality seemed to be invested with a dramatic force of which there had been no trace in the long and violent scene with the prince. It was as though she was in some sort capable of expressing herself in action and movement, while in all the arts of speech she was a mere stammerer. At any rate, there could be no doubt that in this one scene she realized the utmost limits of the author's ideal, and when she faded into the darkness beyond the moonlight in which she had first appeared, the house, which had been breathless and silent during the progress of the apparition, burst into a peal of applause, in which Wallace and Kendal heartily joined.

"Exquisite!" said Kendal.

"Exquisite!" said Kendal in Mrs. Stuart's ear, as he stood behind her chair. "She was romance itself! Her acting should always be a kind of glorified and poetic pantomime; she would be inimitable so."

Mrs. Stuart looked up and smiled assent.

"Yes, that scene lives with one. If everything else in the play is poor, she is worth seeing for that alone. 'Remember it!'"

"The little warning was in season, for the poor White Lady had put too fine a point upon particulars of blurring the impression she had made. In the great situation of the end of the second act, in which she counters Isa to give, in the presence of the court, a summary of the supposed story of the 'White Lady,' her passion at once of love and hatred charges it with a force and meaning, which, for the first time, rouses the emotions of the prince as to the reality of the supposed apparition. In the two or three fine and dramatic speeches which the situation involved, the actress showed the same absence of knowledge and resources as before, the same powerlessness to create a personality, the same lack of all those quicker and more delicate of perceptions which we include under the general term 'refinement,' and which, in the practice of any art, are the outcome of long and complex processes of education. There, indeed, was the palpable fact—the whole explanation of her failure as an artist lay in her lack both of the lower and of the higher kinds of education. It was evident that her technical training had been of the roughest. In all technical respects, indeed, her acting had a self taught, provincial air, which showed you that she had natural cleverness, but that her models had been of the poorest type. And in all other respects, when it came to interpretation or creation, she was spoiled by her entire want of that inheritance from the past which is the foundation of all good work in the present. For an actress, must there be one of the two kinds of knowledge; she must have either the knowledge which comes from a fine training—in itself the outcome of a long tradition—or she must have the knowledge which comes from mere living, from the accumulations of personal thought and experience. Miss Bretherton had neither. She had extraordinary beauty and charm, and certainly, as Kendal admitted, some original quickness. He was not inclined to go so far as to call it "power." But the quickness, which would have been promising in a debutante has richly endowed on the physical side, seemed to him to have no future in her. "It will be checked," he said to himself, "by her beauty and all that flows from it. She must come to depend more and more on the physical charm, and on that only. The whole process of her success is and will be that way."

Miss Bretherton's inadequacy, indeed, became more and more visible as the play was gradually and finely worked up to its climax in the last act. In the final scene of all, the prince, who, by a series of accidents, has discovered the Countess Hilda's plans, has to wait for her in the armory, where he has reason to know she means to try the effect of a third and last apparition upon the prince. She appears; he suddenly confronts her, and dragging the disguised, shrieking Hilda behind him, he confronts the ghost. The ghost, in the terrible scene which follows, is the actress' best piece of work. Supporting herself by the shoulders of the prince, she hangs over him, her head thrown back, her eyes fixed on his face, her whole frame quivering with the terrible excitement of the scene. The prince, who has been all along the chief figure in the play, who has been the chief mover in the action, who has shown himself a man of power and of passion, who has wooed and won the White Lady, who has defied his father and his country for her sake, who has sacrificed beauty, character and life itself—

"A great success could hardly have wished for a better opportunity. The scene was so obviously beyond Miss Bretherton's resources that even the enthusiastic house, Kendal fancied, cooled down during the progress of it. There were signs of restlessness, there was even a little talking in some of the back rows, and at no time during the scene was there any of that breathless absorption in what was passing on the stage which the dramatic material itself amply deserved.

"I don't think this will last very long," said Kendal in Wallace's ear. "There is something tragic in a popularity like this; it rests on something unsound and one feels that disaster is not far off. The whole thing impresses me most painfully. She has some capacity, of course; if only the conditions had been different—if she had been born within a hundred miles of the Paris conservatoire, if her youth had been passed in a society of more intellectual weight—but, as it is, this very applause is ominous, for the beauty must go sooner or later, and there is nothing else."

"You remember Desforets in this same theatre last year in 'Adrienne Lecouvreur?'" said Wallace. "What a gulf between the right thing and the wrong! But come, we must do our duty!" and he drew Kendal forward towards the front of the box, and they saw the whole house on its feet, clapping and shouting, and the curtain just being drawn back to let the White Lady and the Prince appear before it. She was very pale, but the storm of applause which greeted her seemed to revive her, and she swept her smiling glance round the theatre, until at last it rested with a special gleam of recognition on the party in the box, especially on Forbes, who was outdoing himself in enthusiasm. She was called forward again and again, until at last the house was content, and the general exit began.

The instant after her white dress had disappeared from the stage a little page boy knocked at the door of the box with a message that "Miss Bretherton begs that Mrs. Stuart and her friends will come and see her." Out they all trooped along a narrow passage and up a short staircase, until a rough temporary door was thrown open, and they found themselves in the wings, the great stage, on which the scenery was being hastily shifted, lying to their right. The lights were being put out; only a few gas jets were left burning, round a pillar, beside which stood Isabel Bretherton, her long phantom dress lying in white folds about her, her uncle and aunt and her manager standing near. Every detail of the picture—the spot of brilliant light bounded on all sides by dim far reaching vistas of shadow, the figures hurrying across the back of the stage, the moving ghost-like workmen all around, and in the midst that white booded, languid figure—revived in Kendal's memory whenever in after days his thoughts went wandering back to the first moment of real contact between his own personality and that of Isabel Bretherton.

CHAPTER IV.

A few days after the performance of the "White Lady," Kendal in the course of his weekly letter to his sister sent her a fairly detailed account of the evening including the interview with her after the play, which had left two or three very marked impressions upon him. "I wish," he wrote, "I could only convey to you some of her personal charm such as might balance the impression of her artistic defects, which I suppose this account of mine cannot but leave on you. When I come away that night after our conversation with her I had entirely forgotten her failure as an actress, and it is only later, since I have thought over the evening in detail, that I have returned to my first standpoint of wonder at the easy toleration of the English public. When you are actually with her, talking to her, looking at her, Forbes' attitude is the only possible and reasonable one. What does art, or cultivation, or training matter? I found myself saying, as I walked home, in echo of him—so long as nature will only condescend once in a hundred years to produce for us a creature so perfect, so finely fashioned to all beautiful uses! Let other people go through the toil to acquire; the aim is truth; but here is beauty in its quintessence, and what is beauty but three parts of truth? Beauty is harmony with the universal order, a revelation of laws and perfections of which, in our common groping through a dull world, we find in general nothing to remind us. And, if so, what folly to ask of a human creature that it should be more than beautiful. It is a messenger from the gods, and we treat it as if it were any common traveler along the highway of life, and cross-examine it for its credentials instead of raising our altar and sacrificing to it with grateful tears.

"That was my latest impression of Friday night. But, naturally, by Saturday morning I had returned to the rational point of view. The mind's morning climate is removed by many degrees from that of the evening, and the critical revolt which the whole spectacle of the 'White Lady' had originally roused in me revived in all its force. I began, indeed, to feel as if I and humanity, with its long, laborious tradition, were on one side, holding our own against a young and arrogant aggressor—namely, beauty, in the person of Miss Bretherton. How many men and women, I thought, have labored and struggled and died in the effort to reach a higher and higher perfection in one single art, and are they to be outdone, eclipsed in a moment by something which is a mere freak of nature; something which, like the lilies of the field, has neither toiled nor spun, and yet claims the special inheritance and reward of those who have?

It seemed to me as though my feeling in her presence of the night before, as if the sudden overthrow of the critical resistance in me had been a kind of treachery to the human cause. Beauty has power enough, I found myself reflecting with some fierceness—let us withhold from her away and a prerogative which are not rightly hers; let us defend against her that store of human sympathy which is the proper reward, not of her facile and heaven born perfections, but of labor and intelligence of all that is complex and tenacious in the workings of the human spirit.

"And then, as my mood cooled still further, I began to recall many an evening at the Francaise with you, and one part after another, one actor after another, recurred to me, till as I realized afresh what dramatic intelligence and dramatic training really are, I fell into an angry contempt for our lavish English enthusiasms. Poor girl! it is not her fault if she believes herself to be a great actress. Brought up under misleading conditions, and without any but the most elementary education, how is she to know what the real thing means? She finds herself, the rage within a few weeks of her appearance in the greatest city in the world. Naturally she pays no heed to her critics—why would she?

"And she is indeed a most perplexing mixture. Do what I will, I cannot harmonize all my different impressions of her." Let me begin again. Why is it that her acting is so poor? I never saw a more dramatic personality. Everything that she says or does is said or done with a wrath, a force, a vivacity that makes her smallest gesture and her lightest tone impress themselves upon you. I felt this very strongly two or three times after the play on Friday night—in her talk with Forbes, for instance, whom she has altogether in her toils, and whom she plays with as though he were the gray bedded Merlin and she an innocent Vivien weaving harmless spells about him. And then, from this mocking war of words and looks, this gay camaraderie, in which there was not a scrap of coquetry or self consciousness, she would pass into a sudden outburst of anger as to the impertinence of English rich people, the importance of rich millionaires (who here had done or twice to come), her for their evening parties as they would order their coal; or the impertinence of the young swell about town who thinks she has nothing to do behind the scenes but receive his visits and provide him with entertainment. And, as she quick, impetuous words came rushing out, you felt that here for once was a woman speaking her real mind to you, and that with a flashing eye and curving lip, an inborn grace and energy which made every word memorable. If he would, but look like him to speak like this! on the stage! But there, of course, is the rub. The whole difficulty of art consists in losing your own personality to speak, and finding it again transformed, and it is a difficulty which Miss Bretherton has never even understood.

If you have made up your mind to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla do not be induced to take any other. A Boston lady, whose example is worthy imitation, tells her experience below:

"In one store where I went to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla the clerk tried to induce me to buy what he intended should be sold for Hood's, but I told him I was not to be deceived, that I might take it on to days trial, that if I did not like it I need not pay for it, etc. But he could not prevail on me to change. I told him I had taken Hood's Sarsaparilla, knew what it was, was satisfied with it, and did not want any other. While I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla I was feeling real miserable with dyspepsia, and so weak that at times I could hardly stand. I looked like a person in consumption. Hood's Sarsaparilla did me so much good that I wonder at myself sometimes, and my friends frequently speak of it."—Mrs. Ella A. Goff, 21 Terrace Street, Boston.
